If you prefer to use our free bullet print magazine, please see the explanation below. Step 1: Start creating Index Print and list the topics you want to put in order that you think you want them to appear. You can always print out another copy of the index if you find that you are making too many changes when planning the perfect planner that will work You. I like to keep all the pages in a binder instead of using the finished book. This makes it easy for me to make changes when I want to simply by replacing one page. Either print out one of the finished options below or open a bullet magazine maker maker your own. Open DIY Bullet Journal App Step 2: Create each of the major Bullet Magazine Index collections, future magazine, monthly magazine, and daily magazine Pick a template that you think will work best for each theme. For example, if you're creating a future magazine and want to include six months, select a six-section layout, or print a three-section layout twice and divide it into two pages. You can also print out a blank dotted page or grid page and share it yourself. You can replace the template at a later stage if you decide a different layout. Step 4: Create custom collections Write the theme on each page Add the theme to the top of each page and page number at the bottom. Add a page to the index you created earlier. The number of each page is then you add numbers to the index (along with the theme from the previous step) so you can easily find the content. Prepare each bullet magazine template Either draw each collection from scratch, or use our free app and find a ready-made BuJo template for each collection. There are different types of layouts available. You can use a ready-made printed with a set of layout or open our app to create the perfect layout for you. Bullet Journal PDF Any of the printed bullet magazines on this site can be downloaded as a PDF file. To do this, click on the fold page icon. Your PDF document will be downloaded instantly. Open DIY Bullet Journal App Step 5: Print templates You can either create each bullet magazine template or use our ready-made magazine printing bullets. Once the templates are ready, you can add the entries manually. Have printouts bound or put them in a binder. I like to use a binder to make my bullet log because it makes it easy for me to add pages, delete pages that don't work for me or make changes. Pages are letter size (8.5 x 11), but you can print them out smaller using printer settings to make them suitable for your binder. When you use a binder you can also store pages that remain relevant even when you start a new bullet log. You can also replace completed to-do lists with new lists, but still store pages such as motivational quotes that have remained relevant for years. It's really useful when you're just starting out and isn't sure how you want to set up a bullet log. For example, if you thought that a template with two sections would work for a particular page, and once you start you prefer three section templates, just replace the page and add the correct page number. You can also use the old Planner to store your bullet log pages. If you use a binder, you can create a binder coating. Step 6: Add content to handwriting Once you've prepared a bullet log you can start adding content by writing on a printed template. Bullet Bullet must be handwritten because of the benefits of handwritten writing. This include requiring you to think about what you are going to write and therefore do not include tasks or events that don't make sense. While there are many advantages to writing by hand there are also drawbacks. Some people prefer not to use the system than to write everything from scratch and sometimes more than once when it needs to be moved. Another drawback is that because the bullet log laptop is usually associated with used you can't make a change. If you can't see yourself creating BuJo manually, then you may prefer to use our bullet log app. The app will allow you to create each of the bullet log modules with a few clicks. You choose the pattern you want to use and type it. Before you print it, you can add your own text, edit the text, add decorations, or change the layout. You can still reap the benefits of handwriting by creating templates with the app, and then adding your notes (tasks, events, and notes) manually. Open the DIY Bullet Journal App you can use the finished print above (see each of the collections) or open our DIY bullet magazine app to create your own bullet log from scratch using our finished items. Stick to the print to your bullet logbook with glue or washi tape. You don't necessarily have to use a laptop. You can use a binder, a traveler's laptop or even turn your lucky planner into a bullet log!
