FOLLOW USA The ability to respond to messages that originate from The PlayStation Network is essential if you want to stay in touch with your buddies. You're not going to be present in front of the TV and having the console open all the time, so it's nice to be able to stay online and even respond to messages. With the PlayStation®Messages app, users will be able to see who is online and send a message to friends and friends from your mobile device. People will constantly be online, so you will always be achievable through the app, no matter where you are in the world. You can also check your friends list and see what they play and you can send text or voice messages as well as photos and stickers. Always stay in touch with your friends, even if you're away from the PS4. The PlayStation Messages app for your mobile device includes the following features: See who's online and what game they're playing. The account is required to use this app. The use of this application is governed by a licensing agreement for the following URL: (. And, until a couple of minutes ago, I never had a problem with it. But if I'm honest, although the problem I have now is pretty infuriating - especially considering it shouldn't happen in the first place, since the last time I opened the app was two days ago - it's still not even even aligned among my top five reasons for giving this a COMPLETELY justified two star rating, which I still feel was pretty generous to me. Seriously, which company actually considers it appropriate not only to develop and produce, but also to continue to support not one, not 2, not 3... But Eight (8!!) SEPARATE mobile apps, each connecting to a different function on the same device?! Almost as if they feel that each of these different features attracts so much bandwidth on mobile connections, they all need their own specialized server tools in order to work properly. I mean obviously I know apps like the PS4 Second Screen are probably more useful as standalone, but do PS Messages, PS communities, PS offers and From Hell Experience PlayStation really and really need your own apps? At this point, you guys might as well just just a piece of our phone storage app, if you really feel each of us needs each of these apps. Sorry everyone who spent time reading, but this whole concept has been slowly nibbling me for quite a long period of time. LOL Anyway, the rant is over. Communicate with friends on The PlayStation Network directly from your Android device with PlayStation Messages. The PlayStation is more than just a game console now, with numerous social features that connects gamers under one roof. PlayStation Messages lets you connect to PSN gamers without even being on your actual console. You can send a message to your friends and groups, and see who is online at first sight. PlayStation Messages allows you to send not only text messages, but also short voice messages that you record from the app. It also allows you to send cute stickers and share photos with your contacts. The app also supports group messages with up to 100 other players at a time. You need to have a PlayStation Network account in order to use this app. Check out Tom's guide for more Android news and updates and Android apps. Download Download
